News & Information on
The Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets & ACC Football

State's No. 1 kicker commits to Georgia Tech

"After touring the Southeast to see his favorite colleges, Harrison Butker will be staying close to home to play football.

The kicker from Westminster committed to Georgia Tech while driving back to Atlanta from a recruiting trip to Kentucky. He was also considering Auburn and North Carolina. Butker is considered to be the state's best by several recruiting analysts.

Chris Griffin commits to Georgia Tech football over Clemson, South Florida

Georgia Tech picked up another big commitment for its 2013 recruiting class a Crawfordville, Florida offensive lineman Chris Griffin picked the Yellow Jackets over Clemson and South Florida among others. Griffin is rated as a 3-star prospect and is the third offensive lineman to commit to Paul Johnson for 2013.

Tech's Smith healthy and ready for big year

Orwin Smith has always put his best foot forward on the field. Except this year, his right foot will be better than it ever has been in a Georgia Tech uniform.

The Yellow Jackets' starting A-back produced 921 yards offensively (615 rushing, 306 receiving) and also was the team's primary kick returner in 12 games despite being plagued by a turf toe injury for most of the 2011 season.

ESPN Breaks Down Tech's Football Schedule

Gut-check time: Day one. Right off the bat, we'll find out what the Jackets are made of, as they travel to Blacksburg for a Labor day opener against Virginia Tech. This game has historically decided the winner of the Coastal Division. It should again carry such lofty implications. For those who say it will be an advantage for the Hokies' defense to have the whole summer to prepare for Paul Johnson's spread option offense, I don't completely buy that as a game-changing advantage
